

C.R. Speech at Kossuth

Hello everyone, my name is Jacob Minock, and I'm the College Republican President at Iowa State University.

Before I get started, I would like to thank everyone who came out tonight, and then I'd like to thank Republican Party of Kossuth County Iowa and their chair Kathy Keller. Now I have to say, when I was first asked to come to Kossuth County I thought, huh strange name, wonder if there's any relation to the famous Hungarian freedom fighter and politician. I looked it up on google and it was indeed named after Kossuth Lajos himself. I thought about doing this speech in Hungarian in his honor, but my Hungarian is not that good, and nobody would understand anyway. Sajnalom.

But I'm not here to speak Magyar, I'm here to talk about being a Conservative on a college campus.

What's it like being a Conservative on a Public University's Campus. It's rough to say the slightest. You're essentially public enemy number one for most of the people there. How dare you have a difference of opinion than them. Everything about the public higher education school system breeds the socialist mindset.

Your typical college student has thousands in debt but they'll put that in the back of their minds. You want food? Go swipe your card get some food. (It doesn't matter that you're paying $10 for a $5 meal). Student government is putting something on. Great let's go; It doesn't matter that they just wasted a thousand bucks on nothing. Professor's? World class, the foremost authority on some dead French author of fiction, clearly you should listen to that guy on economics. And of course, any facts you disagree with or hurt your feelings are probably racist. My Asian roommate for instance was called racist by his white Asian American studies professor for disagreeing. And the worst thing of all, because everyone around you is going through this same indoctrination, unless you have some sort of conservative, common sense outlet, many people fall to the dark side of leftist teachings.

Some of my favorite hypocrisies are that men can't have any say on killing babies, i.e. abortion, because I don't have lady parts, but heaven forbid some intellectual with blue hair wants to ban guns. Even though they've never held a gun before in their life, no doubt we should listen to them. And going back to the lady parts, that's probably offensive because it includes the word "lady," and as we all know, gender is a social construct. Forget the traditional cisgendered binary male and female, we have genderfluid, demigender, cloudgender, entrogender, hemigender, melogender, orbgender, subgender, vocigender, and I don't ask me to explain what they are I don't know either. But they exist or so I'm told. All examples of a quasipsuedoscience being promoted at public universities around the country.

Let's not forget toxic masculinity, because if you played with GI Joe's or Nerf guns as a kid, you're basically the devil. Every crime committed in America essentially stems from that toxic masculinity. Now personally I disagree with that. Toxic masculinity is what threw the Brit's tea in the Harbor. Toxic masculinity stormed the beaches of Normandy. Toxic masculinity is crawling through tunnels infested with Viet Cong. Toxic masculinity is boarding ships in high seas during the dead of night looking for Escobar's narcotics or human traffickers. Toxic masculinity doesn't create problems, it solves them.

Keep in mind that if you don't cooperate with their groupthink you'll get sent to the "Office of Equal Opportunity," wow could they have given it any more Orwellian of a name? There an actual investigation will take place, once again your marvelous tax dollars at work.

However, my favorite thing I've heard, Trump who is and I quote "literally Hitler" and colluding with the Russians. Wow somebody failed high school social studies. Trump is such a fascist dictator you can literally hold countless marches against him, write all you want against him, and tweet all you want at him without getting arrested. Yup totally authoritarian. As I mentioned earlier, I know a little Hungarian, my family hails from Eastern Europe, and luckily they all made it over half a century or more ago. A close family friend participated in the Hungarian revolution of 1956, and my father remembers the Prague Spring of '68 which happened 50 years and a few weeks ago today, and how devastated his father and uncle were as tanks rolled through their families' villages.

That is authoritarian, and thank God, despite what you may hear from a college student, we are no where near that. Many people don't like Trump, and many have legitimate complaints about his policies, but you'd be hard pressed to find a College Student who can articulate something other than "he's a racist bigot" or my personal favorite "he's an old white man" Congrats by your own logic that makes you racist and ageist, but once again hypocrisy.

Now what can you do to help? College Republicans could use your support. We try to operate as a social club connecting like minded individuals while helping the GOP and growing their presence. I for instance, met all my roommates through College Republicans. We've ticked off hardline socialists on multiple occasions so you know we're doing something right.

Lastly I would once again like to thank everyone for inviting me here to speak, and in the spirit of Kossuth Lajos himself, "Jo volt veled beszélgetne" it was nice talking to you. If anybody has any questions, I'll be sticking around for a while, come and find me.
